BUILD STEEL, BUILD STRONG

SYMBIZ NETWORK™

We were never meant to do life alone and that includes in business.

Every business leader needs an “inner circle” of camaraderie, accountability, and practical help. Without that, business challenges can quickly choke out our relationships with God, our family, and business associates. Even our personal wellbeing is at stake.

Symbiz Network facilitates peer groups, called Growth Rings, among the conservative Anabaptist communities. We have 22 groups in Ohio, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Illinois, Kentucky, Wisconsin, Iowa, and Missouri with nearly 175 members. Groups are carefully assembled so everyone can freely share and truly support one another. “I think Symbiz is going to be the single most powerful business and personal development tool out there,” said one Growth Ring member.

A seven-member board of Anabaptist businessmen and an executive director lead the Symbiz Network organization. The board consists of experienced businessmen who are farmers, marketing company owners, nonprofit leaders, house builders, and transporters who have each personally experienced the amazing blessings of a business peer group.

To make sure the meetings create worth for members, Symbiz Network provides meeting templates, facilitator coaching, and personal goal worksheets. Groups consist of book learning, goal setting, and accountability.

Book learning. Groups read one business book a month and then discuss it at their monthly meetings. “A lot of business books are secular, but they have good things we can apply. The network groups are a way of reading secular books in a safe environment,” explains Dale Savage, Executive Director of Symbiz. “It keeps Anabaptists from having a secular mindset by discussing in groups what applies and what doesn’t.” Books are available for members at a 25% discount from Boon Books of Goshen, Indiana.

Goal setting. Goals can be as small as getting up as soon as your alarm goes off or spending more time with your family or losing a certain amount of weight. When you are disciplined in small goals, you will find you are more disciplined in other areas.

Accountability: Interconnected accountability with a larger overarching group helps harness the power of positive peer pressure. In fact, a larger network is one of the advantages of Symbiz. We will have a network directory of all Growth Rings, and members will have access to anyone in the directory across the network.

Growth Ring members receive two free passes to the Annual Business Summit every year. This one-day event is packed with high-value presentations, networking, and good food and fellowship.

If this resonates with you, consider joining a Symbiz Growth Ring. To learn more, call or text us at 800-394-7970 or email connect@symbiz.org. You can also learn more online at www.symbiz.org.

Cheryl Stott, Nutritionist

How can a functional nutritionist help with gut health?

As a functional nutritionist, I can order lab testing and interpret the results into a plan of action to help you take back your health. Together we work to uncover the hidden offenders, remove them and restore balance to your health.

What kind of testing can be done to determine gut health?

The most common form of lab test done is a GI-MAP. This is a stool test that detects parasites, bacteria, fungi, and more by targeting DNA of the organisms tested.
